zoetis
Help calves build better immunity against respiratory disease with Inforce 3[®], One Shot BVD, and Bovi-Shield GOLD One Shot.

Choose Vaccines That Overcome IBR Dominant Antigen Interference

Typically, multiple respiratory vaccines are administered at the same time for convenience. But research shows that some vaccine antigens may interfere with the immune response to other antigens.¹ As a result, some antigens may not deliver their full protective effect.

By applying 25 years of vaccine research and enhanced manufacturing methods, Zoetis developed two unique solutions to help ensure its respiratory vaccines provide high levels of protection and help ensure cattle receive the maximum health benefits of immunization.

ONE SHOT BVD

BOVI-SHIELD GOLD One Shot

Inforce 3[®] Circumvents IBR Dominant Antigen Interference With Intranasal Administration

Intranasal administration of the temperature-specific IBR virus in Inforce 3[®] prevents the vaccine IBR virus from replicating throughout the calf's body and interfering with antigens such as Mannheimia haemolytica in One Shot[®] BVD vaccine given in the neck. As a result, the animal receives the high levels of protection expected from both vaccines.

In a single intranasal administration with Inforce 3[®] at the same time the calf received One Shot BVD vaccine, a robust antibody response to IBR and M. haemolytica.¹

Bovi-Shield GOLD One Shot[®] is Built to Handle IBR Dominant Antigen Interference

Using advanced manufacturing processes, Zoetis combined Bovi-Shield GOLD[®] 5 and One Shot[®] into one vaccine to deliver the components of a single syringe vaccine without compromising the efficacy and safety of the individual vaccines.

- Greater neutralization
- Enhanced levels of antibodies
- Addition of adjuvant

With the knowledge of IBR dominant antigen interference, Zoetis formulated Bovi-Shield GOLD One Shot to stimulate effective protection against IBR and M. haemolytica, when given concurrently.
